When you already know the article you want to find, you have a couple of options to see if we have it online.

Use Multi-Search
It can be as simple as entering the title of the article or an author’s last name and some words from the title.

You may see an icon for a PDF. If not, use Full Text Finder—we might still have it online.

Important to know:
- You will need to login first to get the article content if you aren’t on campus.
- Is your USC network username and password not being recognized in Multi-Search? Get a Carolina Card or a Distributed Learning Support Services card. More info here

See a video of finding an article using Multi-Search

Use the Online Journals link to see if we have any issues of a journal online. This is the same thing as “Full Text Finder” – the link you see from article databases.

Layne, H., & Lipponen, L. (2016). Student Teachers in the Contact Zone: Developing Critical Intercultural "Teacherhood" in Kindergarten Teacher Education. Globalisation, Societies and Education, 14(1), 110-126

Important to know:
- Enter the title of the journal. In this case, Globalisation Societies and Education
- We may get the journal from a variety of providers. Check the dates of coverage. How you search or browse to get the article will vary based on provider.
- You may be prompted to enter your USC network username and password. Your access is NOT dependent on having a Carolina Card or the Distributed Learning Support services card.

See a video of locating an online journal by title and finding the article

Still having problems? Contact the Research & Instruction Desk at 803-777-4866 or via Ask a Librarian chat.